Author Biography

Chuck Ervin is a former defense industry executive, Navy veteran and engineer with a life-long passion for great literature, science, and technology.

Chuck Ervin grew up in Texas. His dad was a Texas farm boy who became a World War II bomber mechanic. His mom was a farm girl who gave up her teaching job to become a wartime aircraft draftsman. It was probably inevitable that Chuck would love airplanes.

Chuck has been an avid reader since the second grade when he spent afternoons in the school library. During the long, hot Texas summers, he'd ride his bike down a country road to meet the bookmobile and then peddle home with a basket full of books. By the time he was ten, he'd read many of the juvenile classics and was moving up to adult literature. Years later, when people asked him how he learned to write, he always said, "By osmosis, you can't read the works of great writers without something rubbing off."

An English professor at the University of Texas gave Chuck a science book for his 9th birthday.

It opened his eyes to the amazing universe we inhabit and kindled his interest in Einstein, relativity, and high-energy physics. He still has the book and considers it one of his life's treasures.

Chuck is a Vietnam era Navy veteran. His first ship was part of the task force sent into the Sea of Japan when the North Koreans captured the Pueblo. He returned to the Sea of Japan a year later when a North Korean MiG-21 shot down an American EC-121 electronic surveillance aircraft. When his Navy service was complete, he returned to college to finish his engineering degree.

After graduation, Chuck accepted a job with an engineering firm in Washington State. A year later, a subsidiary of Pan American World Airways recruited him and he worked for that legendary company for seven years. While still in his early thirties, Pan Am promoted him to manager of a multi-discipline engineering department under contract to the Navy during the construction of the Trident Submarine base. Chuck was on the waterfront on August 12, 1982 when the first Trident Submarine, USS Ohio, arrived at her new home port.

When Lockheed Martin, the world's largest defense company, recruited him for a vice president's position in the Aeronautics Sector, it was like going home. The just-completed merger of Lockheed with Martin Marietta meant that Chuck was going to work for the direct descendent of the companies that had trained his dad and employed his mom in World War II. He was in the Fort Worth plant the night the first F-22 mid-section was being prepared for shipment to Georgia for final assembly of the world's most advanced air superiority fighter.

After Lockheed Martin, Chuck worked as a senior executive of several large defense corporations. He was appointed to a defense advisory board by the undersecretary of defense and served two terms as chairman of one of the largest professional associations of defense contractors. He retired as the executive vice president and chief operating officer of a subsidiary of the largest security services company in the world. When people ask him about his career in the defense industry, he smiles and says it was incredibly interesting. For a poor boy from Texas, it was a dream come true to find that he could actually get paid for working around airplanes and traveling all over the world.

Chuck's novels reflect his engineering education, his career in the defense industry, and his knowledge of science, military weapons systems, and international geopolitics. His novels are an eclectic blend of multiple fiction genres including thrillers, mysteries, science and technology, with an intriguing touch of science fiction.

Chuck and his wife live on the Olympic Peninsula of Washington State.

Chapter Excerpt

EXCERPTED FROM TUESDAY, JULY 1st

“Good morning, General,” Ahmed Malik said cautiously as he was ushered into the general’s private study.

Fixing an icy stare on his subordinate, Jhalawan said, “I should have you shot. Instead of the decisive blow against the western democracies you promised, your incompetence has put my name at the top of the most-wanted lists in the United States, the UK, Germany, and France. I can no longer travel internationally without fear of some CIA or MI6 assassin putting a bullet in my brain. Even in Islamabad, my enemies are plotting how to use this debacle against me. Late yesterday afternoon, the French ambassador presented a formal request to our president to have me extradited to France to stand trial for war crimes. Our president’s advisors have suggested that doing so might be the best way for Pakistan to avoid international sanctions while conveniently removing the one man who has the power to strip him of the presidency.”

Malik offered no apology, but admitted no fault. He knew, as did General Jhalawan, that the task force convened by Sir Lionel Smythe at MI6 headquarters had done a brilliant investigative job that had prevented all but one of the nuclear devices from being detonated.

“Yes sir. I understand. Perhaps I can arrange something to shift attention away from you and Pakistan.”

“How?”

“By creating a fog of disinformation and conflicting facts that cause at least some of the intelligence analysts in the west to conclude that the attacks were actually planned and executed by the Iranians, who made it appear that you and Pakistan were behind the attacks.”

Jhalawan snorted derisively. “The western intelligence services know too much. It would never work.”

“If you’ll forgive me for respectfully disagreeing, I think it will.”

EXCERPTED FROM TUESDAY, JULY 1st

Even though the Iranians have consistently claimed that they are not working toward nuclear weapons, there are many in the west who are convinced they are lying and that they either already have nuclear weapons or soon will have. You and I both know that Iran does, indeed, already have nuclear weapons and we can use our intelligence information to reinforce our disinformation campaign.
